Forest School

Year 3 have been learning about the Stone Age in Forest School. Last week, they came up with their own Golden Rules for Forest School and made natural paints using berries, grass and mud. They made cave-style paintings on material using the paints.

This week, they learnt about how Stone Age people had to gather resources from different places. They were split into villages and had to work together to get water from the river back to their village. One of the children suggested forming a chain to pass the water along which worked very well. It was great to see some fantastic teamwork.
